Prime Money Market Funds' Holdings Update—Eurozone Holdings Drop Close to December Levels

By Emily Gallagher and Chris Plantier

Prime money market funds reduced their holdings of eurozone issuers to 12.2 percent of assets in June from 15.5 percent of assets in May (chart). The decline of more than 3 percentage points puts eurozone holdings close to the trough of 12.0 percent seen in December 2011. The June decline was driven primarily by reductions in French, German, and Dutch holdings (table), and 80 percent of French holdings mature in 30 days or less.
